

ORDINANCE NO. 20080605-043

AN ORDINANCE READOPTING THE PROVISIONS OF ORDINANCE NO. 20080424-106 RELATED TO THE DEVELOPMENT OF MISSION BETHANY SUBDIVISION.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF AUSTIN:

PART 1. The provisions of Ordinance No 20080424-106 are readopted, with the exception of Part 5 which is deleted, as follows

PART 1. Findings.

The Council finds that:

- (1) Austin annexed 13,473 acres of territory in December, 1997, with an estimated population in the annexed area of over 27,000 people. On the effective date of each annexation, the development of property in the annexed area thus became subject to city ordinances, rules, and regulations that apply to development of property inside the city.
- (2) Texas law, as construed and applied by Texas courts, upholds a city's power to regulate the use and development of annexed property for the public benefit, even when imposition of a new regulatory requirement may cause inconvenience, hardship, or loss to a person with an interest in the property. Texas law also confirms that a person may establish a "vested right" to finish development of a property without being subject to newly-applicable city regulations, when in a particular case there is proof that the actual hardship or loss resulting from compliance outweighs the public benefit resulting from having the development comply with those regulations.
- (3) A court may ultimately determine if a person has a vested right to finish a specific development of property without complying with one or more city regulations. Litigation to establish or deny a vested right is time consuming, expensive, and risky, and to the extent possible should be limited to cases where the public interest in requiring compliance with city regulations is clear and compelling.
- (4) The Council has the inherent authority under the Austin City Charter and the Texas Constitution to consider and resolve the competing interests and values at issue when a person asserts a vested right to develop property without complying with city regulations. The Council may and should require compliance with city regulations when the public benefit from compliance clearly outweighs the hardship or loss to a person with an interest in the development. When the potential for private hardship or loss is greater and the public benefit is less compelling, the Council may determine it is in the public interest to authorize continued development of property without requiring that development to comply with some or all of the city's development regulations. This ordinance is intended to respond to, anticipate, and resolve assertions of a vested right to develop by striking the appropriate balance between public interest and private hardship for the development of property in areas annexed in December, 1997.

- (5) In 1998, Bethany Lutheran Church ("Bethany"), owner of Lots 1-6, Mission Bethany Subdivision ("the Property"), incurred millions of dollars in debt in reliance on development entitlements obtained prior to annexation by the City of Austin. The debt was incurred to fund both Bethany's sanctuary building and the infrastructure for development of the entire Property, construction of which began prior to annexation. Bethany planned to use revenue from the development of part of the Property to help retire the debt.
- (6) Entitlements granted by the City of Austin to Bethany in Ordinance 980507-A included the ability to develop and use the non-church part of the Property for certain retail, office, and congregate living purposes in furtherance of the Church's plans.
- (7) Conditions prevailing in 2008 make it infeasible to develop the Property for the commercial and lifetime living uses allowed under the 1998 Ordinance, but make it feasible instead to develop low density multifamily residential uses that are potentially less intense than the uses allowed under the 1998 Ordinance.

PART 2. Ordinance Supersedes Conflicting Regulations.

This ordinance supersedes a conflicting provision of the City Code, of an ordinance outside the Code, or of a rule or regulation adopted under the Code or other ordinance.

Except as otherwise provided in this ordinance, site development regulations for the subdivision shall be equivalent to those under the Land Development Code for multifamily residential low density.

PART 6. In lieu of compliance with the provisions listed in Part 5(A) through (E), development of the Property must comply with the following requirements:

- (C) Development is prohibited in the water quality transition zone, except for

- (E) The Director of the Watershed Protection and Development Review Department may approve minor adjustments either to the impervious cover allocations under Section (A) of this Part between the religious assembly use and the residential use or to the requirements for storm water controls under Section (B) of this Part if
  - (i) the overall level of water quality protection and stormwater management is not reduced or impaired,

- (ii) total impervious cover does not exceed 650,000 square feet on the Property, and
- (iii) there no other significant effect on public health, safety, or welfare
