On April 8, 2010, the Council approved first reading of an ordinance relating to permitting and energy efficiency requirements of the 2006 International Residential Code. Council continued the public hearing to allow for additional consideration of proposed revisions related to reactivation of expired building permits.

The Residential Code provides minimum requirements to address the design and construction of one and two-family dwellings and townhouses.

The proposed amendments will establish minimum requirements for application and permit expiration times, and codify the process for determining whether a permit that has not received inspections within a 180-day period has remained active due to ongoing work necessary to complete the project. The ordinance also deletes requirements for energy efficiency, which are updated by the new Energy Code, and includes an amendment limiting changes to approved construction plans.
