On June 29, 2010 the Parks and Recreation Department (PARC) communicated to the City Manager's Office its intention to maximize the use of all PARC facilities. The Department is committed to addressing issues and needs that are important to the community and supports initiatives that benefit the general public. As such, PARC evaluated the facility use at South Austin Recreation Center and determined it is appropriate to offer classroom space to Austin Independent School District (AISD) for the facilitation of the Go Project, a special education program with the goal of assisting students with disabilities age 18 to 22 transition from the school environment to post- school independent living.

The City of Austin, PARC and AISD share a mutual interest in seeing that IDEA- eligible (Individuals with Disabilities Education Improvement Act) high school aged and older students are afforded opportunities to obtain skills to assist them in becoming productive citizens. The use of South Austin Recreation Center by AISD allows students to develop and practice age appropriate life skills outside the traditional school setting. Transitional life skill services provided at South Austin Recreation Center will be in accordance with those items specified in each student's Individualized Education Program (IEP), and may include, but are not limited to, vocational training, learning to use public transportation, utilization of leisure time, and independent living skills.

The majority of time AISD will be at South Austin Recreation Center will be during hours of the day that South Austin Recreation Center is not open to the public. AISD's use of the facility will in no way interfere with PARC's recreational programming or general public access.
