The ca. 1935 McCrummen-Wroe House meets the criteria of architectural and historical significance. It is an excellent example of Adamesque Colonial Revival architecture designed by prominent local architect Roy L. Thomas, and is associated with Dr. Thomas D. McCrummen, Austin's first pediatric specialist, and with two prominent leaders of Austin's banking community, both at American National Bank: Thomas D. McCrummen, Jr., and Ed R.L. Wroe, Jr., who both served as presidents of the bank during periods of great expansion in the 1960s and 1970s.

BASIS FOR RECOMMENDATION:

Architecture:

Two-story rectangular-plan Adamesque-style Colonial Revival side-gabled brick house with a symmetrical façade consisting of a central entry with two window bays on each side. The house has a prominent semi-circular portico on Corinthian columns and a leaded-glass fanlight above the door. Paired glazed doors open onto the balcony above the portico. The house consists of a two-story 5-bay central block with a two-story section on each side; the section to the left of the central block contains an attached garage with double doors opening to the side of the house. The house is ornamented with quoins at the corners of the central block and corners of the house, along with dentil work at the cornice and ornamental keystones above the first-floor windows. Fenestration consists of 9:9 Colonial Revival styled windows on the first floor and 6:6 Colonial Revival-styled windows on the second floor and in the secondary bays on each side of the central block. Roy L. Thomas, a prominent Austin architect, designed the house for Dr. Thomas D. and Elizabeth Wroe McCrummen in 1935.

The Adamesque form of the Colonial Revival style refers to more elaborate detailing and ornamentation than that found on many Colonial Revival houses of the 1930s, which were noted for their almost severe style. Adamesque houses also featured many more rounded surfaces, inside and out, including details such as the semi-circular portico so prominently featured on the McCrummen-Wroe House. The style takes its name from Robert Adam, a Scottish builder and designer in the late 1700s, who combined softer elements of the Baroque and Rococo styles of the early 1700s with the rectangular lines of the Georgian styles of his own time. Adam was also noted for integrating the design of the interior with that of the exterior, and for using classical motifs such as garlands, urns, and medallions on buildings. The Adamesque form of Colonial Revival resulted in more ornate and varied detailing on otherwise symmetrical Colonial Revival houses and was popular in the design of high-end buildings from the 1890s through the mid-1930s.

Historical Associations:

The house was built in 1935 for Dr. Thomas D. and Elizabeth Wroe McCrummen and designed by prominent local architect Roy L. Thomas. Dr. McCrummen was a native of Paris, Texas, but grew up in Austin and graduated from the University of Texas and the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston. He returned to Austin in 1927 and established his practice in the Norwood Building. Dr. McCrummen was Austin's first pediatric specialist, and practiced until his death in 1954. His wife Elizabeth was the daughter of H.A. Wroe, a prominent wagon and buggy dealer, and one of Austin's first automobile dealers.. She was active in many civic and charitable organizations, including the Settlement House and Junior League. After her husband's death, she remained in the house until 1963, when she and her son Thomas D. McCrummen, Jr. sold the house to Ed R.L. Wroe, Jr., and his wife, Frances. Thomas D. McCrummen, Jr., born in Austin in 1934, grew up in this house. He attended the University of the South in Sewanee, Tennessee and graduated from the University of Texas in 1955 with a business finance degree. He graduated from the Southwestern Graduate School of Banking in 1960. He had worked part-time and during the summers while he was in school at the American National Bank, which had been founded by George Littlefield, and run by his grandfather, H.A. Wroe in its early years. After graduation, he rose through the ranks of the bank, becoming cashier, vice-president, president, and vice-chairman of the board. He also served on the State Securities Board in the late 1960s.

Ed R.L. Wroe, Jr., and his wife Ammon, purchased the house in 1963 from Elizabeth Wroe McCrummen. Wroe was born in Austin, graduated from the University of Texas with a degree in business administration, and began work at the American National Bank. He became president of the bank in 1961 upon his father's death (his father was Elizabeth Wroe McCrummen's brother). They sold the house to corporate attorney J. Gaylor Armstrong and his wife Kathy in 1981. The Armstrongs lived here for 17 years, then sold the house in 1997 to the current owners, David and Kimberly Hood.

2 Top Offices Filled by Bank

Ed Rhodes Littlefield Wroe Jr. was elected president of the American National Bank and A. C. Hoff, chairman of the board of directors of that institution Wednesday afternoon in a meeting of the bank's directors.

Both men, vice presidents of the bank, were named to succeed to the posts left vacant by the death last Saturday morning of Wroe's father, Ed R. L. Wroe Sr., who was president and chairman of the board at his death.

Wroe, 35, became the fifth president of the American National Bank which was founded here in 1886 by Major George W. Littlefield. His grandfather, the late H. A. Wroe, succeeded Major Littlefield, and in turn came Major Robert Robinson and E. R. L. Wroe Sr.

Wroe Sr. has been senior vice president of the bank for many years and has been with the bank as vice-president for the past 25 years.

Wroe was born in Austin and received his secondary education at Culver Military Academy at Culver, Ind. During world war II he served with the 8th Infantry Division (the old Ohio National Guard unit) and after the close of the war was with the 42nd Division, the famed "Rainbow" Division from Oklahoma.

When Wroe came out of the service in 1945, he returned to The University of Texas and received a bachelor of business administration degree in public accounting in 1949.

Wroe served as budget chairman of the United Fund in 1935 and 1936, and is a member of the Austin Lions Club and has served as treasurer of the Episcopians' Clubs of Texas. He is a member of St. David's Episcopal Church and a former member of its vestry.

He lives with his wife, Aramian, and three children, Nancy, Betty and Chelle at 2300 Windsor Road.

Volunteer Service Post Just Natural Step for This Banker

Election of Ed Rhodes Littlefield Wroe Jr. as a director of the Volunteer Service Bureau of Austin was a natural step for his associates to follow.

For the 35-year-old vice-president of the American National Bank has given voluntary service to a number of causes for the welfare of Austin and its people since he entered the local business scene.

The Volunteer Service Bureau of Austin, he explained, is one that provides a clearing house for people in Austin who want to volunteer for work in various social and welfare agencies—in helping qualified workers and the proper jobs together.

The bureau a month ago opened an office in the basement arcade of the Austin National Bank with Mrs. T. M. Porter in charge, but it is a safe conclusion to figure that Wroe supplied the know-how to a lot of questions concerning welfare agency work at his desk in the American National Bank from day to day.

Ed was born in Austin, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. L. Wroe Sr. He received his secondary education at Culver Military Academy at Culver, Ind.

That education and military training stood him in good stead a little later as he entered military service in World War II and was on active duty for six years. That included a term in the Officers Training School after his basic training and his overseas service for one and one-half years. During the war he was with the 8th Infantry Division (the old Ohio National Guard unit) and after the close of the war was with the 42nd Division, the famed "Rainbow" Division from Oklahoma. He is now a major in the Army Reserve on the staff of the 80th Infantry Division.

ED WROE JR.

When Wroe got out of the service in 1945, he returned home to enter the University of Texas and three years later got his Bachelor of Business Administration degree, majoring in public accounting.

When he is not busy during the day with his banking and welfare activities, Wroe finds time to serve as treasurer of the Sportsmen's Clubs of Texas and is a member of the Austin Lions Club. He served in 1935 and 1936 as budget chairman of the United Fund of Austin.

Wroe is a member of St. David's Episcopal Church where he recently served as a member of the vestry.

He resides with his wife, Aramian Meyland, and their three children, Nancy, Betty and Chelle, at 2300 Windsor Road. Nancy is a second grade pupil at St. Andrew's Episcopal School.

ED WROE, JR.

NEW PRESIDENT WROE SETS "OPPORTUNITY KEYNOTE" FOR '65

Ed Wroe, Jr. wastes no time swinging into action. A few days after he had been elected to the Chamber of Commerce presidency for '65, he was showing up at numerous working meetings of CC committees. And he decisively set the tone for the ensuing year with his comment to his fellow directors, "opportunity comes to those who work for it."

At the last board meeting in '64 banker Wroe said that he foresaw even "greater opportunity" in the approaching year.

Native Austinite Ed Wroe, Jr. is a natural for his hometown's key civic job, the Chamber of Commerce presidency. As the youthful president of one of Austin's leading banks, the American National he is an experienced administrator. He comes from a long line of Texans who have been at the forefront in promoting the growth of their community. His education is well rounded, and his comfortable reserve exudes the type of sincerity which draws loyal support.

For two years he has served as CC vice president in charge of Public Affairs . . . known as the "business viewpoint" department. The Public Affairs Department keeps informed on happenings affecting business in the legislative field and this pertinent information includes the national, state and local levels. Emphasis of course is placed on the national scene and how citizen action can build impact through a better understanding of our economic system.

Rounded Education

Born 40 years ago, Wroe is a trim, modern executive type with a fondness for sports coats. He attended Austin Public Schools and graduated from Culver Military Academy in '42 with honors in English.

He graduated from The University of Texas with a Bachelor of Business Administration Degree majoring in Public Accounting with highest honors. He graduated in 1961 from

The Stonier Graduate School of Banking, Rutgers University.

During World War II, Wroe served three years with the Army in three campaigns in the European Theater and maintains retired reserve status with rank of major.

The bank president is married to the former Frances Ammon Neyland. They have four children, Nancy, 14; Betsy, 12; Callie, 8; and Ed III, 2½ years.

Wroe is president of the Austin Clearing House, a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants; Beta Alpha Psi, honorary accounting fraternity; Beta Gamma Sigma, honorary business fraternity; and Phi Delta Theta Fraternity; member of the board of directors of the Texas Capital Corporation and the Texas Bankers Association.

Historic Family

Wroe's banking background began when George Washington Littlefield of Panola County, Miss., came to Gonzales County with his parents in 1850.

Littlefield attended Baylor University at Independence, fought with the Eighth Texas Cavalry, Terry's

Texas Rangers and somehow lived through the biggest battles of the Civil War, reaching the rank of major in 1863.

The war over, Littlefield returned to Gonzales and began driving cattle to Kansas. He gained extensive landholdings and his LFD and LIT ranches in the Texas Panhandle and on the Pecos River in New Mexico spread the fame of his brand.

Littlefield moved to Austin in 1883 to be nearer the center of business activity. It was a fantastic change from his ranch life on the plains and Littlefield liked this green hill country so well he organized the American National Bank in April, 1890, with a capital stock of $100,000 subscribed by the directors.

Bank Growth

The bank opened its doors in a cool corner of the Driskill Hotel where it prospered for 21 years . . . then it moved to Littlefield's building on Congress Avenue and by 1913 the capital was raised to $300,000.

Littlefield shifted much of the detail to assistants in later years, particularly to a nephew by marriage, H. A. Wroe, who came into the bank in 1903 and became a substantial stockholder and president when Littlefield was chairman of the board. The Major, married to the former Alice P. Tiller of Houston, had two children who died in infancy.

Wroe has been a banking name ever since. The late E. R. L. Wroe, Sr. succeeded Major Roger Roberdeau as president and Ed Wroe, Jr. has succeeded his father.

Sooner or later everyone does business with a bank, and in this jet age where the pace is constantly accelerating, the emphasis is on "sooner". Chances are the frequency of individual banking contacts is on the upswing. For the average American a visit to the bank has become a regular event.

Like so many of the institutions which have been inwoven into the texture of everyday life, the strong, stable financial institution has been taken for granted and customers have little time to look behind the scene of the teller's counter or the loan officer's comfortable living room-like setting.

"What's the mysterious course of the checks I write?" is a likely question to cross the bank customer's mind. Or maybe he'll ask such questions as: Why do I have to use the personalized check with the funny number? Are the IBM machines going to replace people? If my checkbook is stolen, can the thief get my savings?"

Modern Day View

He'll find that the answer to these and many other banking questions revolves around service. It is the modern banking viewpoint, and the emphasis gets heavier as the competition grows stronger. The customer's strong interest in service first became apparent after World War II.

"Banks underwent a complete change of personality as people had more money and demanded more service," explained one banker.

They are no longer the dark book-keeping centers where the customer was received with less than open arms. The shades have gone up on banking, and the results are just short of spectacular. Walking into a local bank is something like crossing the threshold of a large and elaborate private home. There is must hospitality . . . restrained and dignified. Bright light predominates. Floor to ceiling windows front busy Austin streets. Inset lights leave the impression of additional windows in what might have been dark corners.

Tasteful decor, highlighted by imaginative throw rugs, paintings by local artists and interesting planters, well-dressed attractive women employees, and soft music . . . all make the customer feel at home.

A Look over the Marble Counter

NEW ERA FOR BANKING

Austin History Center

(NEW ERA Continued)

Bank executives do business in the living room. They are busy behind large and impressive desks, and they are highly available extending a warm welcome. "Old time bankers would be wide-eyed", one bank executive stated ever so aptly.

Take Your Check

The best example of the efficiency of modern banking is to follow a check from the second a signature dries until it comes back in a statement... or it comes back hot to the "Pay to the order of"... (this presents a problem to the man who took the check... if he is a good tracker, all will be well.) High on the bankers' totem pole is the honest check writer, and there are more of those than any other breed.

"Except, I might point out, that he will not always write legibly. Many people attack a check and their signature seems to have gone through the Indian wars. There are certain characteristics, of course, but it is easier to forge a scribbly signature," one banker pointed out.

Banks are insured against forgery. Should your checkbook and credentials be lost or stolen the bank wants to be notified so they can keep a close watch on your signature.

Travis County Banks

There are nine banks in Travis County, all of different complexion but their inner workings are just about the same.

The huge volume of business now being done by banks has resulted in the computer system. Personalized checks are issued customers free of charge. The numbers at the bottom are in magnetic ink, the key of the computer system. This means speed, accuracy and security, for the benefit of all.

The bank and insurance drafts are the real villains to the new banking age, and all bankers name them as the number one headache.

"I'll tell you one thing, if people don't stop using drafts all these new fangled machines might as well be player pianos," was the candid comment of one vice president.

"Sure, we try to educate the customer to the importance of using his own checkbook, but you only push a customer so far before he adopts (See NEW ERA page 13)
