The Balcones Canyonlands Conservation Plan – Shared Vision was based on a financing plan that used both participation fee revenues and tax increment financing (TIF) by Travis County to generate funds for acquisition of the remaining acreage needed for the Balcones Canyonlands Preserve. During the first two years of plan implementation, landowners were slow to participate under the BCCP and often chose the alternative route of obtaining an individual 10(a) permit from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. As a result, revenues from both primary financing mechanisms fell short of expectations, despite a historically high surge in land development within Travis County.

A lowering of participation fees to stimulate landowner interest in using the BCCP permit was one of the financing plan modifications recommended by the BCCP Coordinating Committee after extensive discussions with the public and the BCCP Citizens Advisory Committee. On May 4, 1998, the Coordinating Committee passed a revised fee schedule that effectively lowered most fees for BCCP participation for a period of one year. The City Council (May 21, 1998) and the Travis County Commissioners Court (June 23, 1998) also passed the revised fee resolution as an amendment to the original BCCP-Shared Vision.

On May 22, 2012 the BCCP Citizens Advisory Committee recommended continuing the current 2012 BCCP Participation fee schedule. They recommended maintaining this fee structure until the fees are specifically revised by the Coordinating Committee in the future.

The BCCP Coordinating Committee accepted the Citizens Advisory Committee recommendations on May 31, 2012 and voted to implement the fees until the fee schedule is revised.

The key provisions for the continued fee structure are included in the attached resolution.
