PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1929 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-story, rectangular-plan, front-gabled board-and-batten frame bungalow with a partial-width inset porch; single 2:2 and 4:1 wood-frame, wood-sash fenestration.

RESEARCH

The address does not appear in city directories before the edition of 1930-31, when the house is listed as vacant, but city utility permits date from late 1928. Booker T. and Cession Moore rented this house in the early- to mid-1930s. Booker T. Moore was described in his 1997 obituary as a self-made man who had to leave school in the 6th grade to help support his family. He astutely acquired a cart, and began selling ice cream on the streets of Austin. He then worked for a rubber company for a short period of time, then went back into business for himself, selling ice and wood from a truck he purchased. After he married, he opened a produce market and wood yard, and later became Austin's first and only African-American bonded house mover.

By 1937, the house was rented to Henry and Sarah Hill; he worked for the City Street and Bridge Department, but is not listed in city directories after 1937. Sarah Hill, who worked as a cook and a maid, stayed in this house until the early 1940s. The house continued to be rented by African-American cooks, laborers, and maids through the 1990s.

STAFF COMMENTS

The house appears in the Comprehensive Cultural Resources Survey (1984) but without a priority for research.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Postpone to May 20, 2013 to explore alternatives to demolition. This house represents a relatively intact example of a working-class cottage in a historically African-American neighborhood; these cottages are becoming more scarce in the City and staff encourages measures to preserve this house, if not on site, then within an appropriate context. The house also has some significance as an early, though rented, home of an African-American entrepreneur.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES

Booker T. and Cession Moore (ca. 1931 – ca. 1936)

Booker T. Moore appears in the 1920 U.S. Census as the 13-year old son of Lula Moore, a 44-year old North Carolina-born widow who lived in a rented house at 1162 Angelina Street. She had no occupation listed in the census report. With her lived her three children, Mamie, Booker, and Celia, and her brother, Whiley, 35, who also had no occupation listed.

Booker T. (spelled Brooks in the census report) and Cession Moore appear in the 1930 U.S. Census as lodgers in the home of Solomon and Laurine Hanna, an African-American couple who lived at 1306 E. 6th Street in Austin. Booker T. Moore is listed as a taxi operator with his own license; Cession Moore had no occupation listed. Both Booker and Cession Moore were then 23, and both had been born in Texas.

Henry and Sarah Hill (ca. 1936 – ca. 1943)

Henry and Sarah Hill appear in the 1930 U.S. Census report; they rented a house at 405 W. Annie Street in Austin. Henry Hill was then 50 years old, had been born in Pennsylvania, and was a street laborer. Sarah Hill was then 46, had been born in Texas, and was a laundress for a private family. They had two adult children: J.B. Toles, 25, was a yardman for a private family; Lorenzo Toles, 23, a truck driver for an automobile yard; and Lorenzo's wife, Mary, 22, a laundress for a private family.

The 1940 U.S. Census shows Sara Hill as the 57-year old renter of this house. She is listed as a widow, who worked as a maid in a private home. With her lived her son, J.B. Toles, then 36, a construction laborer, his wife, Mary, 31, a maid for a private family, and their daughter, Sara Alice, 9. The household also included a roomer, Lullaby Revata (?), a 25-year old, Texas-born African-American maid for a private family.

Booker T. Moore

Hard work, dedication made him a self-made man.

History books are filled with biographies of self-made men. Mr. Booker T. Moore was one of them. Born in 1907 in Austin, Mr. Moore credited his heritage and inheritance to his mother, Mrs. Lula Moore, his teachers at Gregorytown School, Jenny Lampkin, Minnie Brewer, Norma Dotson, G.W. Norman, and his two strong hands.

Mr. Moore's teachers saw his potential, gave him special attention because of vision problems and along with his mother urged him to stay in school. But Mr. Moore dropped out after the sixth grade to help support his family.

With his mother's permission, a neighbor gave him a horse. He then went to the Shoal Creek Laundry where they were ungrading their mode of transportation from wagons to trucks. He offered the owner one dollar and fifty cents for a wagon. The owner told him if he could find enough parts to make a good wagon he could have it and use the money as an investment in his business. With his wagon in operation, he persuaded the Violet Crown Ice Cream Co. to stock him with three flavors which he peddled at five cents a cone for three years.

At age 15, Mr. Moore became friends with Mr. Sherman Edwards and joined the taxi business. At the age of 19, he married Cession Raymond. To this union was born one child, Frances Elizabeth. After marriage he worked a short time for Hicks Rubber and B.F. Goodrich. He earned enough money to buy a truck and went into business selling ice and wood. He and his wife, Cession opened a produce market and a woodyard at Cornal and 12th Streets. His wife and daughter after school, mother and sister operated the produce market while Mr. Moore operated the woodyard. In 1940 he learned the moving business from Mr. Sam Larremose, and around 1960, he became the first and only black bonded house mover in Austin. His inventory of equipment, his skill in management and his performance as a house mover gained him wide respect.

He was a well-known, respected businessman. Many in his line of business, considered Mr. Moore the "tail corn" of Austin.

Mr. Moore built his own house, except for the electrical wiring and the tiling. He hauled his own lumber from Bastrop and carried his own rocks from a rock quarry in Round Rock.

He was not a joiner. He liked to think of himself as the man in "the house by the side of the road," a friend to all mankind. Not much of a talker, Mr. Moore said a man should know when to talk, when to stop and when to speak up for himself.

Mr. Booker T. Moore was a self-made man.

Historical data was gathered by Historian Ada Simond.

He leaves to mourn his passing, one daughter, Frances Elizabeth Moore-Pierce; two sisters, Mammie Elder and Celia Pearson; one niece, Gertrude Britton; personal friend for 25 years and caregiver, Lonnie Waldon, all of Austin. A host of nieces and nephews.

Mr. Moore was 89 years old.

The family wishes to express their gratitude to Dr. Douglas Terry, St. David skilled nursing center, Elder Haven Senior Day Care.

Visitation will be Thursday, January 9, 1997, from 4:00 to 8:00 p.m. at Phillips-Upshaw and Richard Funeral Home Chapel, 1410 East 12th Street. Funeral service will be January 10, 1997, at 11:00 a.m. East Side Church of Christ, 3106 East 14½ St.
