The Sustainable Food Policy Board (SFPB) underwent an annual work planning process in March 2012 the timing of which was in line with when the board was fully seated and began work in March, 2009. Beginning in January 2013 the board will go to a calendar year work planning process.

The following are outcomes of the work plan the board put into place, as well as a continuation of the activities from the previous year's work plan. The thirteen-member volunteer board focused attention on food security this year, as exemplified through recommendations related to Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program access and collaboration with the regional Community Action Network (CAN) to establish a Food Security working group. Other activities synched with City
