Application for Park Naming/Renaming

1. Proposed Name for Park:

Heath Eiland BMX and Skate Park

2. Biographical description:

Known for a smile that could brighten up a room, Heath River Eiland believed in treating everyone the same. Heath never let what he didn't have keep him from enjoying what he did have. He saw the good in everyone and the positive in everything. On May 10th, Heath suffered a head injury while long boarding near the Mopac bridge on Parmer Lane. Heath was not wearing a helmet and sadly he did not recover from his injury. As painful as it continues to be for his family and friends, there is comfort in knowing that when the Lord called Heath home, Heath was happy, with friends and doing what he love, skateboarding. He became a local hero by helping to raise the awareness and importance of wearing helmets. In death, Heath continued his "Heath Like" giving sprite and gave life and hope to others through organ and tissue donation.

3. Involvement in Austin Community:

Student at:

Summit Elementary School - 2207 Brigadoon Ln. Austin, TX 78727
Murchison Middle School - 3700 N Hills Dr, Austin, TX 78731
Anderson High School - 8403 Mesa Dr, Austin, TX 78702
Activities:
Anderson High School Soccer, Boy Scouts, Upward Basketball, Active member at St. Albert the Great Church, studied guitar at The Pflugerville School of Music, Member of the Anderson Wrestling Team, Member of the Junior National Society, Middle School Soccer, Basketball, Football Player, Middle School JV Choir Member, Member of the Lone Star Soccer Club

-Helmets for Heath benefit encouraged skateboard safety:

Friends and volunteers came together and organized a fundraiser that became a community event. It was held at a local venue to show support for Heath and the Eiland Family. The event was a celebration of Heath’s young and memorable life. Hundreds attended the event, and featured T-shirts with the logo "Helmets for Heath" which echoed the family's mission, which is to promote skateboarding safety. Heath was not wearing a helmet and suffered a fatal head injury. Numerous generous organizations donated their time, food, beverages, and items for the silent auction. Several local bands donated their time and performed at the event. Most importantly free helmets were given to skateboarders. Many came to show their support and love for this young man, Heath Eiland.

-Organ Donor:

Heath's organ donation gave life and hope to 6 lives and many more through tissue donation. 9/16/12.

- Donate Life chose to honor him:

Dignity Memorial selected Heath Eiland as the first Austinite to be memorialized with a floral portrait on the Tournament of Roses Parade held in Pasadena California, 2012.

-Donate Life honors Eiland at Round Rock Express Game 4/12/12:

Donate Life honored Heath at a Round Rock Express game. Donate Life held an event encouraging individuals to register as organ donors. Heath’s story told and he was featured on the billboard/scoreboard. His dad was asked to throw the first pitch.

- 2013 Faces of Austin (Judge’s Choice Winner) in conjunction with AISD and Anderson High School:

"Helmets from Heath" was chosen by Faces of Austin in conjunction with SWSX. The short documentary version of Helmets from Heath (3/2013) was featured as part of Faces of Austin in SXSW 2013. Faces of Austin is a short film exhibition showcasing local Austin filmmakers and their work that reflects what make Austin’s unique identity.

You can watch the short 12 minute version at:

- Anderson High School Film Department Teacher’s & Students:

To continue the mission of promoting skating safety, a team from the Anderson High film department traveled to Hockley, Texas. They interviewed professional and semi-professional skaters at a skate race event. Portions of the interviews were used in the documentary which highlighted the importance of helmets when skating.

-Dedication plaque

The graduating class of 2014 dedicated a 10' by 10” plaque placing it above the athletic entrance in memory of Heath at Anderson High School. Two years after Heath’s accident, his graduating class continued to miss and remember Heath. They honored their classmate with an eternal plaque displaying his name. We have included just a few of the memory cards/letters that the Eiland family received from Heath’s friends and the community Heath. These have been put into a book for the family; it includes over 300 letters, 12 banners and 6+ posters with messages to Heath and his family. He was well loved and is missed!

-The Anderson Soccer team

The team has renamed the “Heart Award”, given to the player displaying the most heart in playing on the field to the "Heath Eiland Heart Award".

- Heath River Eiland College Scholarship put in place at Anderson High School:

The Eiland family has established the Heath River Eiland College Scholarship to help an Anderson student attend college, something Heath had studied and planned for. The first award of this scholarship was awarded in May 2013.
4. Describe the individual’s connection to the park or park system, if any:

This BMX/skate Park opened about a 1 month after Heath’s accident and exactly 1 month after his memorial service. We are grateful for and hope that Austin will provide more parks like this so that BMXers and skateboarders will continue to have a safer place to practice their sport.

Since Heath was an avid sports participant, we feel that having a variety of parks and places throughout the community available to play all sports is important. But most of all that safety awareness is number one.

5. If proposing a name that is not an individual, summarize the reason for the name.

Naming the park, Helmets for Heath BMX and Skate Park would be a reminder for everyone to wear a helmet. Naming the skate park for Heath would be naming the park for one of their own, someone who loved the sport of skateboarding.
Heath Eiland's gift of organ donation saves six people

AUSTIN -- Denise Miles keeps a photo of Heath Eiland on her cell phone. Although she never met him, the 16-year-old gave her a new chance at life thanks to a new heart.

Miles traveled from her home in San Antonio to meet Heath's parents for the first time at their church in North Austin.

"He reminds me every day I got something good going on. I'm here for my son, and I'm here for my family," said Miles.

When Heath died in a skateboarding accident in May 2011, his parents made the decision to donate his organs.

"Heath looked out for people, he loved people, and he would love the idea of helping people spend more time to have one more day with their families," said Heath's mother Rebecca Eiland.

Six people received Heath's organs, and his family met two of them Sunday, including Chris Mendez. He waited a year and three months for a liver transplant and is alive today because of Heath.

"It literally is a miracle that can change someone's life, not only to prolong it, but make it completely better as in my case," said Mendez.

Heath's parent say several of his friends are now signed up to be organ donors too.

"It's a wild thing when you think that someone else has your son's liver, has your son's heart, has your son's lungs," said Rebecca Eiland. "But at the same time when you look beyond that, you look at the lives. What better gift is there than the gift of love and life?"

If you want to sign up to be an organ donor, check out Donate Life Texas's website for more information.

The beat of her son’s heart was too faint through the stethoscope. So Rebecca Eiland put it aside and leaned in close, her ear listening for the lub-dub.

“Oh my gosh,” she said, gasping, as she listened to her son’s heart inside Denise Miles’ chest.

Miles, who had a leaking heart valve, was the recipient of Heath Eiland’s heart after the Anderson High School sophomore died following a skateboarding accident on May 10, 2011.

“It’s difficult to realize that his heart was in my belly, but now it’s in someone else, giving life to her. It’s so hard to imagine,” said Eiland, who met Miles, 40, and her family for the first time Sunday in a North Austin church.

Heath Eiland, 16, was fatally injured in a skateboarding accident in May 2011.

Eiland and Miles were joined by Chris Mendez, 32, who received Heath’s liver, in a small back room at St. Albert the Great Catholic Church.

Rebecca Elland said she wants to encourage parents and famous skateboarders to tell kids to wear helmets when skateboarding — Heath wasn’t during his fatal accident — and to have families talk about organ donations and the lives it can save.

Elland said she has since signed up as an organ donor, seeing the impact her son was able to have on Miles and Mendez, both of whom are parents.

Jeannette Mendez, right, hugs Rebecca Elland on Sunday at St. Albert the Great Catholic Church. Mendez’s husband, Chris, received the donated liver of Elland’s son.

While she’s been in touch with the recipient of one of her son’s kidneys, Elland said she has not heard from the three people who received his lungs and other kidney.

“There’s nothing that could help our son, but in his death, our son was able to save six lives,” Elland said. “I consider our son a hero.”

Donate Life Memorializes Heath Eiland

KVUE, Austin

Family and friends honored the life of an Austin teen on Saturday who died in a Skateboard accident.

Sixteen-year old Heath Eiland’s death last May left a North Austin Community struggling to move on. Those who knew Eiland gathered at the Cook Walden Funeral Home on Saturday afternoon to memorialize him on a national stage.

Classmates described Eiland as a friend to all, who never met a stranger. Since passing away Eiland has continued to help others as an organ and tissue donor.

It’s that sacrifice the brought everyone together for a special ceremony. Charity Donate Life chose to memorialize Eiland in a floral portrait for the rose parade float. After a brief service, friends and family decorated his picture with flowers and natural materials.

“It’s an honor for my son to be acknowledged for doing what he’s doing after life, what he did before life” Eiland’s mother, Rebecca Eiland said. “That is being good to people, just being a good person and just always helping others.”
