PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1911 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-and-a-half story, hipped roof, L-plan frame house with boxed gabled eaves and a projecting front-gabled dormer in the center of the principal façade; partial-width, partially inset porch on square wood posts; the right half of the porch has been filled in with wood and modern sliding windows; a hipped-roof 2nd story addition is on the rear of the right side of the house; fenestration consists of single and paired 1:1 windows with a larger 1:1 in the front-gabled section of the principal façade.

RESEARCH

The house appears to have been built in 1911 for Jesse W. and Alice Maxwell. The Maxwells lived here for the rest of their lives. Jesse Maxwell was a native of Virginia, who came to Austin as a child with his parents. He attended the University of Texas and began his private law practice in Austin in the late 1890s. He was the first county school superintendent in Travis County, and was elected as a state representative from Travis County, where he distinguished himself for work on the beautification of the grounds of the State Capitol and for supporting the University of Texas. He continued his law practice on the 7th floor of the Scarbrough Building, and was appointed as judge of the City Corporation Court in 1933, a position he held for 14 years. He died in 1947, while living in this house.

Judge Maxwell married twice – his first wife, Alice Humphreys Maxwell, died in 1942; he then married Arny Houston Maxwell, who lived in this house until her death in 1961.

STAFF COMMENTS

The house appears in the Comprehensive Cultural Resources Survey (1984) with a Priority 2 for research.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Release the permit upon completion of a City of Austin Documentation Package, consisting of photographs of all elevations, a dimensioned sketch plan, and a narrative history, for archiving at the Austin History Center. The house has undergone architectural changes over the years, that is staff's opinion, outweigh the historical significance of the house and disqualify it for landmark designation.

Judge Maxwell Dies; Funeral Rites Set Today

Veteran Jurist Had Been Retired Seven Months From Bench

Funeral services for Judge Jesse W. Maxwell, 82, who died Monday at 5 a. m. in St. David's Hospital, will be held Tuesday at 10:30 a. m. at the Cook Funeral Home.

The Rev. Flynn V. Long, pastor of the First Southern Presbyterian Church and Dr. Edmund Heinsola, pastor of the University Methodist Church, will read the last rites. Burial will be in Oakwood Cemetery with Masonic services at the graveside.

Retired Seven Months

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Arnie Houston Maxwell, one brother, James H. Maxwell, and two sisters, Mrs. T. P. Washington and Mrs. Milton Morris, all of Austin.

Death came to the veteran attorney and jurist almost seven months after his retirement from his post as judge of the corporation court of the City of Austin, where he served for 14 years.

Fall at Home

A fall at his home almost a decade ago which resulted in a broken left hip from which he never fully recovered resulted more recently in an infection setting in, causing hardening of the arteries in his left leg and making his condition become critical last week.

Judge Maxwell was born March 26, 1865 in Virginia, the son of a physician, and came with his parents to Travis County as a young boy, the family settling in the Fiskville area where he received his early education at the old Walnut Creek School.

Receives Degree

Subsequently, he attended the University of Texas where he received his bachelor of laws degree in 1892 and began private practice of law in Austin.

In 1898, he was appointed by the county commissioners court of Travis County as the first county school superintendent under the present system. Later, he campaigned successfully and was elected a member of the 26th Legislature from Travis County.

During his two-year term as a lawmaker, Judge Maxwell fought for two main things—consideration of the needs of the University of Texas and beautification of the capitol grounds.

Re-Enters Practice

He re-entered the private practice of law after his short career as a lawmaker where he remained until the late Mayor P. W. McFadden and his colleagues on the City Council honored him with appointment as judge of the corporation court on Jan. 5, 1933, to succeed the late Judge Ed R. Kone, another distinguished veteran of the Travis County bar.

Illness caused Judge Maxwell to send a message to the City Council last May 1 that he would not be an applicant for re-appointment to the corporation court bench and he retired officially last April 30. He spent his days in retirement at his home, 702 West 21st Street.

Past Potentate

Judge Maxwell was a member of the Scottish Rite Masonic bodies and was a past potentate of Ben Hur Shrine Temple. He also was a lifelong member of the Presbyterian Church.

Before his accident a number of years ago, he was an outstanding sportsman and one of the best known hunters and fishermen in this section of the state. For many years during the holiday season, a successful hunting trip led to a venison dinner reunion with his companions, the late August J. Eilers, Dr. Joe S. Wooten, Richard S. (Skinny) Pryor, Leslie Fox, and a score of other longtime friends at a downtown hotel.

Pallbearers will be A. C. Bull, Dr. R. L. Ramsdell, Loomis Slaughter, Frank Maxwell, Roger B. Tyler and Claude Hill.

Honorary pallbearers will be the deacons and officers of the First Southern Presbyterian Church, all members of the City Council and police force, George Todd, Tom Walling, Arthur Moore, John Olsen, Adam Johnson, J. R. Moore, Joe Roberts, Simon Gillis, Morris Hershfield, Robert Thrasher, W. F. Gohlke, Grady Chandler, W. D. Hart, H. C. Story and J. B. Pace.
