PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1937 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-story, rectangular-plan, side-gabled frame house with a central, partial-width entry cover on paired plain, square wood posts; single and paired 6:6 fenestration.

RESEARCH

The house was built in 1937 by Sigman W. and Agnes Hayes, who lived here until around 1954. Sigman Hayes was born in Bryson, Texas, and grew up in Whitesboro and Denton. He attended the North Texas State Teachers College (now the University of North Texas) in Denton, and taught biology in Gladewater upon his graduation. He and Agnes moved to Austin in 1933 so that he could attend the University of Texas. He taught biological science at Austin High School until the family moved to Galveston in 1943 so that Sigman could get his medical training at UTMB. They returned to Austin in 1947, and Dr. Hayes opened his family medical practice. When he retired in 1972, he and Agnes moved to their ranch near Bertram, where they remained the rest of their lives.

Sigman and Agnes Hayes lived in this house from its construction in 1937 until around 1954. They rented the house out for a short period in the mid-1950s, and in the late 1950s, the house was owned by Buford Casey, an assistant professor at the University of Texas. The house was then a rental property from the early 1960s on with tenants including a teacher in the Round Rock public schools, an attendant at Austin State Hospital, and a nurse at Brackenridge Hospital.

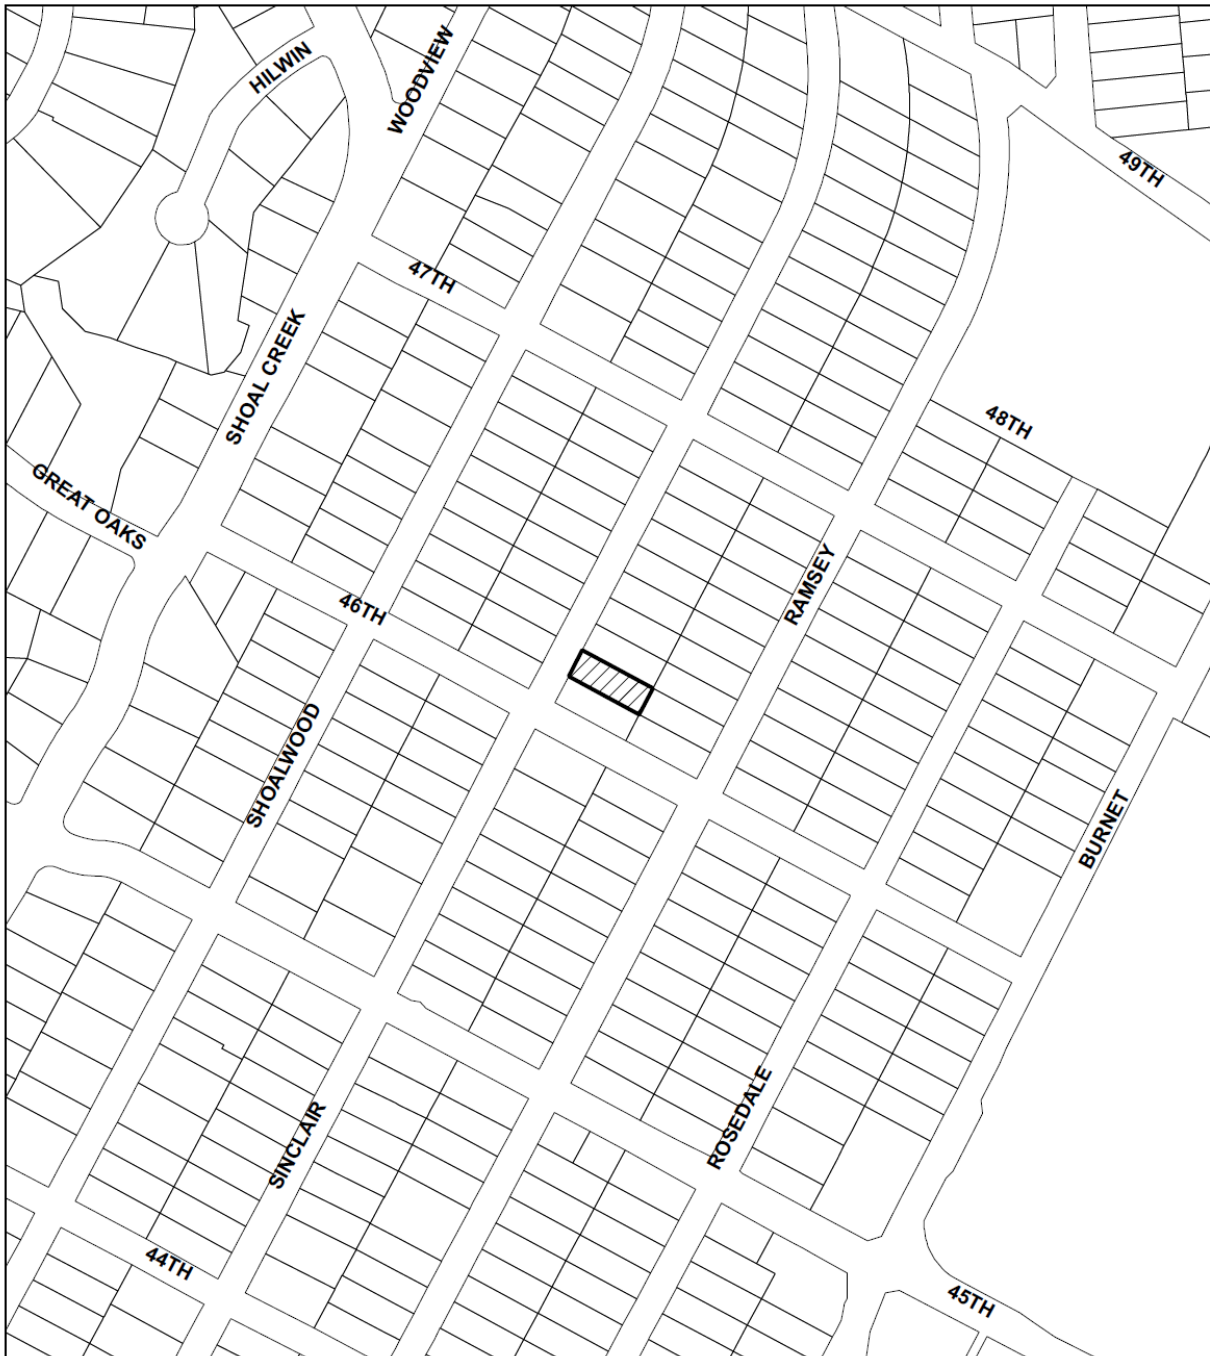

STAFF COMMENTS

The house is beyond the bounds of any City survey.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Encourage rehabilitation and adaptive re-use. While the house is typical of residential design in Rosedale, it does not have the architectural nor the historical significance to warrant individual designation as a historic landmark. Staff strongly urges the applicant to seriously consider retention of the house and the construction of an addition to maintain the historical and architectural context of the Rosedale neighborhood, but if the applicant cannot comply with that request, then staff recommends release of the permit upon completion of a City of Austin Documentation Package consisting of photographs of all elevations, a dimensioned sketch plan, and a narrative history, for archiving at the Austin History Center.
