

HISTORIC LANDMARK COMMISSION
APRIL 25, 2016
DEMOLITION AND RELOCATION PERMITS
HDP-2016-0157
1175 SAN BERNARD STREET

PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1903 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-story, wing-and-gable plan frame house with a partial-width inset porch on paired plain square wood posts and stone piers; transom over the glazed front door; large, non-historic picture window with sliding sashes in the bottom in the principal façade.

RESEARCH

The house appears to have been built around 1903 by Green W. Griffin, a carpenter who later moved to a large house at 1202 Garden Street, and which has been designated as a city historic landmark – the McGown-Griffin House. Green W. and Jessie Griffin lived in this house on San Bernard Street until around 1915. The house was then occupied by Rufus and Mamie Overstreet, who lived here from around 1917 to around 1919. Rufus Overstreet was a plasterer, and after living in this house, he moved to Houston. He returned to Austin at some point in the late 1920s – at the time of his death in 1932, he was living in Austin.

Beginning around 1923, the house made the transition from Anglo families to African-American families. Henry W. and Eva Walker are listed as the owners of the house in the 1924 city directory, which notes that they were African-American. Around 1928, the house was purchased by Lee Andrew and Beulah Murphy, who lived here until around 1946. Lee Andrew Murphy was a waiter at the Austin Country Club, while Beulah J. Murphy was a stenographer for Nathan Rhambo, who ran a mortuary and embalming service for Austin's African-American community. The 1940 U.S. Census shows Beulah Murphy as a lodger in the home of an African-American school teacher in Washington, D.C., where she was working as a stenographer in a private office. Lee Andrew Murphy is not listed in the 1940 census report.

From around 1950 until his death in 1965, Rev. Rogers Q. Allen, and his wife, Lonnie owned this house. Rev. Rogers Q. Allen was born in Caldwell County, Texas to a preacher, and took up the gospel himself throughout his life. In 1939, he established the Corinth Missionary Baptist Church on E. 16th Street in Austin, and served as its pastor until his death in 1965.

From 1965 until the mid-1980s, when they passed away, the house was the home of Emmett and Dessie Washington, a retired couple.

STAFF COMMENTS

The house is inexplicably not included in the Cultural Resources Survey of East Austin (2000)

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Initiate historic zoning. The house, even with its modification to the front windows, retains a relatively high degree of integrity, and has architectural and historical significance for its associations with both Anglo and African-American families of significance in the city.

Further, the house represents the transition of the San Bernard neighborhood from a working/middle class Anglo neighborhood into a middle class African-American neighborhood, and its historical context on the street is important. Staff understands that the owner wants to sell the property and feels that the property would bring a higher price if the house were to be approved for demolition, and that the house has some structural issues. However, staff continues to believe that the house meets the criteria for landmark designation in its architecture and historical associations, and would ask that the applicant consider historic zoning on a portion of the property to preserve the house, and allowing the remainder of the property to be developed. This house may also be eligible for state and federal tax credits for its rehabilitation and restoration, and if the house were to be zoned historic, the owner would also be eligible for the annual property tax exemption offered by the City of Austin, Travis County, and the Austin Independent School District. If the Commission does not vote to initiate the historic zoning case, then staff recommends completion of a City of Austin Documentation Package, consisting of photographs of all elevations, a dimensioned sketch plan, and a narrative history, for archiving at the Austin History Center prior to the release of any permit for the removal of the structure.
