PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1923 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-story, rectangular-plan, front-gabled frame bungalow with a partial-width front-gabled partially inset porch on plain, square wood posts and a non-historic railing; single and paired 1:1 fenestration.

RESEARCH

The house appears to have been built around 1923, although there is a notation in the City utility records that the water service permit for this address was issued in 1925. The house has been a rental property for most of its existence. The first renters were Earl B. and Mabel Norwood, who moved into the house from their farm in Del Valle, Texas. Neither Earl nor Mabel Norwood had an occupation listed in the city directories while they lived in this house, but earlier records show that Earl was a farmer in Del Valle, and later went on to operate a chicken hatchery after moving from this house. The Norwoods lived here until around 1928, and moved back into the house in the early 1930s for a short period of time.

Oscar E. and Gladys Finlay rented the house around 1930; he was an electrical engineer for the State Board of Insurance Commissioners. The house was rented by a painter, George M. Carpenter, and his wife Henrietta, in the mid-1930s; then from around 1936 to around 1943, the house was rented by Irma Alves, the widow of a San Antonio bus driver, who moved to Austin around that time. She had no occupation listed in the city directories nor in the 1940 U.S. Census which shows her as the renter of this house. Her son, Howard, was a tutor at the University of Texas. She had a lodger, Lossie Berrey, who was a dressmaker. Irma Alves moved out of the house around 1943, and back to San Antonio.

The house had a series of renters from the 1940s through the 1960s, including a cashier at a school supply store on the drag, and a mechanic. After around the mid-1960s, students rented the house.

STAFF COMMENTS

The house is listed in the Comprehensive Cultural Resources Survey (1984) but without a priority for research.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Encourage adaptive re-use and preservation of the house if possible; while the front porch railing has been changed, the house appears to be remarkably intact and represents a classic, if not fancy, example of a working-class bungalow. If rehabilitation and adaptive re-use are not feasible, then staff must recommend release of the permit upon completion of a City of Austin Documentation Package, consisting of photographs of all elevations, a dimensioned sketch plan, and a narrative history, for archiving at the Austin History Center. The house does not have the required historical significance to warrant individual designation as a historic landmark.
