PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1911 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-story, square-plan, pyramidal-hipped roofed frame house with a projecting front-gabled bay and a partial-width inset porch on plain, square, wood posts; single 1:1 fenestration.

RESEARCH

The house appears to have been built around 1911. The first occupants were Francis (Frank) and Olive Freeman, who lived here until around 1919. Frank W. Freeman worked as a pressman for the E.L. Steck Company while he and Olive lived in this house. They moved from here to a house on Willow Street, and Frank became the proprietor of an auto battery shop with his brother, Robert I. Freeman and W. Burt Haston, who is also listed as a resident of this house in the 1912-13 city directory. By 1930, according to the census report of that year, Frank and Olive Freeman were living in San Antonio, where he was the proprietor of a garage and she worked as a saleslady in a retail millinery shop. It is unknown when Frank W. Freeman died, or whether he and Olive divorced, but by 1940, Olive Freeman was married to Thomas C. Cage, a road construction contractor in Olmos Park, a well-to-do suburb of San Antonio. She died in San Antonio in 1967.

The house was a rental property again for a short period after Frank and Olive Freeman moved out, then purchased by Walter A. and Ina Tew, who lived here from around 1921 until around 1926. Walter A. Tew, Jr. was an electrician, who worked for A.E. Hancock, then for John L. Martin, both prominent electrical and plumbing contractors in the city.

From around 1926 until around 1936, the house was owned and occupied by Walter W. and Gertrude Whiteside. Walter Whiteside was a mechanic for the City Water Department, and had previously been an engineer for an ice company. Gertrude Whiteside worked as clerk in a dry goods store. After Walter's death in 1930, Gertrude continued to live here with an adult son who worked as a mechanic. She worked as an attendant and laundress at Austin State School until her death in 1936. Walter and Gertrude's daughter, Joe Dube, and her husband, William H. Dube, are listed as the owners and occupants in city directories of the late 1930s. William Dube worked as a salesman for Magnolia Petroleum Company.

The house was then a rental again the mid-1940s, with blue-collar craftsman tenants, including a carpenter and a quarryman. Around 1946, the house was purchased by Lillian Tuke, who lived here until around 1970. Lillian Tuke appears to have been unmarried for all the time that she lived in this house; she had previously lived with her parents on Patterson Avenue, and had worked as a clerk in her father's grocery store. She had no occupation listed in the city directories while she lived in this house.

From 1970 onward, the house was rented, then owned by Jesse P. and Elizabeth Gamboa. Jesse Gamboa worked at Memorial Park Cemetery. After his death in 1987, Elizabeth continued to live in the house. Elizabeth Gamboa passed away in 2011.

STAFF COMMENTS

The house is listed in the Comprehensive Cultural Resources Survey (1984) but without a priority for research.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

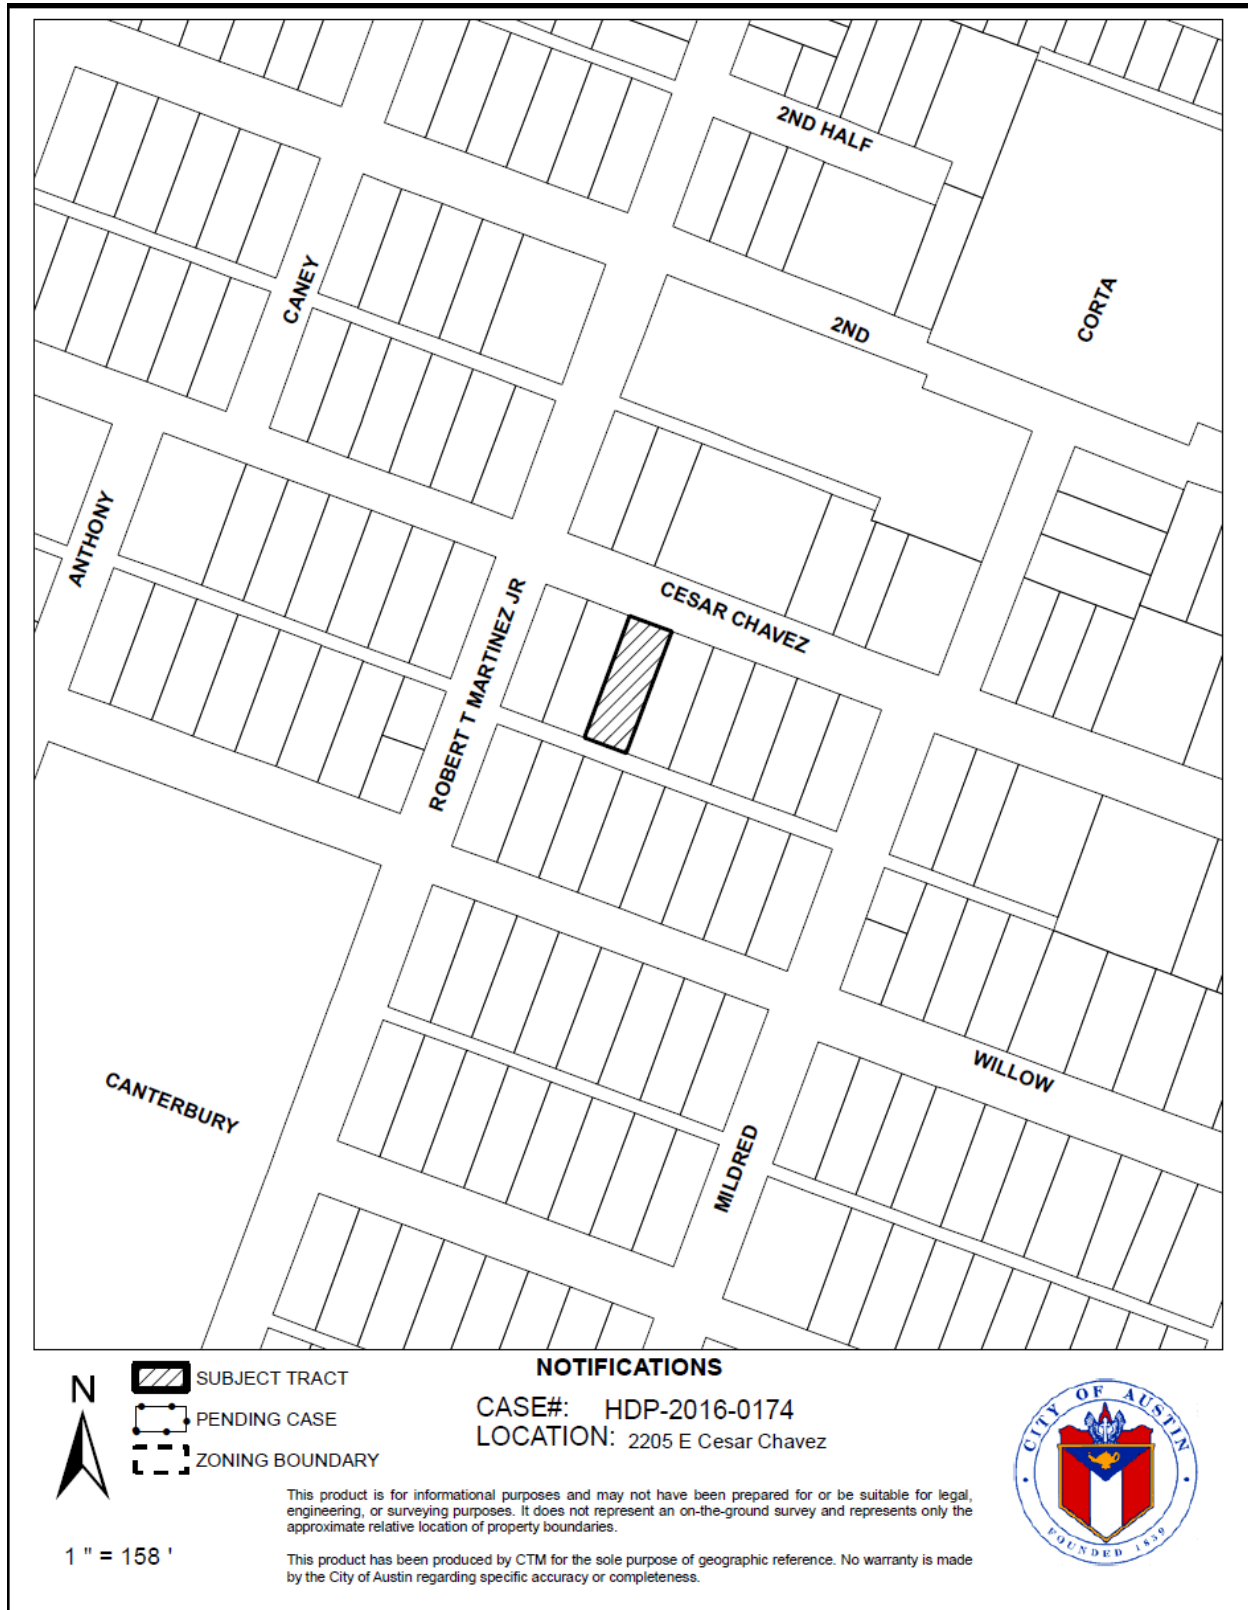

Initiate the historic zoning case. The applicant is withdrawing the application for demolition and will agree to historic zoning for this property.

“Dear Commissioners,

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to sit down with Steve Sadowsky regarding the old house at 2205 East Cesar Chavez. We explored the limitations and opportunities of Staff’s recommendation and decided to support “Staff Recommendation” of “initiating Historic Zoning” on the property. Although it is still limiting to our original program, in considering the fabric and future of the neighborhood and the compromises that are still allowed for development under the “H” designation, we should be able to make it a win for all sides. Please support Staff’s recommendation... we hope this can start a precedence for others to consider what can done in lieu of full demolitions.”
