PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1951 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-story, wing-and-gable plan, front-and side-gabled brick-veneered frame house with an inset carport to the left of the main block of the house; large, fixed-sash picture window in the front façade; other fenestration includes single and double 6:6 windows; shed-roofed entry hood on turned wood posts.

RESEARCH

The house was built in 1961 by Ray Yates, the developer of Crestview. The first owners and occupants were Harry Leon and Elizabeth Austin, who lived here until around 1960. H. Leon Austin was an communications operation specialist for the FAA.

Around 1960, the house was purchased by Loyd and Phillis Skiles, who lived here through the 1990s. Loyd Skiles was from Denton, Texas, where his father and all of his brothers were tailors. Loyd was a salesman for Nash Phillips-Copus home builders when he and Phyllis moved into this house; he then was a retail manager for a business machine company, the proprietor of a copy shop, a printer, and later, an insulation installer.

STAFF COMMENTS

The house is beyond the bounds of any City survey to date.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Encourage rehabilitation and adaptive re-use, but release the permit upon completion of a City of Austin Documentation Package, consisting of photographs of all elevations, a dimensioned sketch plan, and a narrative history, for archiving at the Austin History Center. The house is typical of the early construction in Crestview, and built by the developer of the subdivision, but lacks the architectural and historical significance to warrant individual designation as a historic landmark.
