PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1923 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-story, rectangular-plan, stone-veneered frame bungalow with a front-gabled, partial-width independent porch on battered posts and square stuccoed piers; single 1:1 fenestration.

RESEARCH

There was likely an earlier house on this site which was the home of a series of African-American laborers and laundresses dating back to the turn of the 20th century, but it is believed that this house dates from around 1923, given its architectural features and overall style. Juan and Carmen Castillo rented this house in the 1920s and 1930s, then appear to have bought the house around 1936. Both Juan and Carmen Castillo had been born in Mexico. Juan Castillo was a delivery driver for a Latino-owned meat market until around 1940, when he began listing his occupation in city directories as a stoneworker. He and Carmen lived in this house for the rest of their lives. After their deaths in the late 1970s, the house became a rental property.

STAFF COMMENTS

The East Austin Historical Survey (2016) recommends that this house is contributing to a potential historic district.

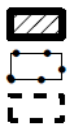

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Initiate historic zoning or postpone to April 24, 2017 to fully evaluate alternatives to demolition. The history of this house suggests that Juan Castillo was the craftsman responsible for the stonework on several houses in the neighborhood; the house is potentially eligible for landmark designation for its architectural significance as the work of a craftsman and there is potentially more information about the work of Juan Castillo to support the historical significance of this house.
