Additional Backup Information

In 2008, the City issued bonds for the purpose of refunding the previously issued 2005 variable rate obligations in order to split the structure into a Series A and a Series B structure. A necessary component of any variable rate demand obligation (VRDO) is a bank liquidity facility. The liquidity facility for these bonds is a Letter of Credit (LOC). The LOC serves two functions: first, to provide liquidity support for the bonds in the event that the bonds cannot be remarketed; and second, as a guarantor should the City be unable to make debt service payments. The City would be obligated to reimburse the LOC provider(s) for all draws made on the LOCs.

The City entered into a LOC agreement with Dexia Credit Bank (Dexia) at the time the bonds were originally issued in 2008. On June 23, 2011, Council approved the execution of a new LOC agreement with JPMorgan Chase Bank (JPMorgan) and Bank of America, replacing Dexia’s LOC. On November 8, 2012, Council approved the execution of an amended and restated LOC agreement with JPMorgan, replacing Bank of America’s LOC. On April 17, 2014,
Council approved the extension of the expiration date of the two JPMorgan LOCs to October 15, 2017.

The City sought bids from 12 banks that had previously expressed interest in replacing the expiring LOCs. Seven banks responded. Bids were submitted for one year, two year, three year, four year, and five year terms. This council request, if approved, will allow the City to replace the expiring LOCs with one from Citibank, N.A. (Citi) and one from Sumitomo Mitsui Banking Corporation, acting through its New York Branch (SMBC). The fees for the new LOCs are proposed at 28 basis points by Citi and 33 basis points by SMBC, both of which are lower than the current fee rate of 42 basis points. With these lower fees, annual costs will decrease approximately $99,000 in the first full year, and will continue to decrease over the term as principal of the bonds is paid down.

In addition to the ongoing LOC fees, there will be certain one-time costs associated with execution of this extension. The estimated total for the one time fees is $250,000 and will be paid to the following entities acting in the capacity noted:

- PFM Financial Advisors, L.L.C – Financial Advisor
- Bracewell LLP – Bond Counsel
- McCall, Parkhurst & Horton – Disclosure Counsel
- Chapman and Cutler LLP – Bank Counsel
- Moody’s Investor Services – Rating Agency
- Standard & Poor’s – Rating Agency
- State of Texas – Attorney General.
