

HISTORIC LANDMARK COMMISSION
OCTOBER 22, 2018
DEMOLITION AND RELOCATION PERMITS
HDP-2018-0532
1503 FOREST TRAIL / 2014 ENFIELD ROAD

PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1935 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-and-a-half story, L-plan, Tudor Revival-styled house with a stuccoed exterior, a steeply-gabled catslide roof at the projecting front entry bay with a round-arched entry; gablets pierce the eaves; prominent exterior chimney on the front of the house; single 1:1 fenestration.

RESEARCH

The house was built in 1935 by Ben Lewis Pillow, the son of Ben and Mary Pillow, who lived in an older house on W. 9th Street that has been designated as a historic landmark. Ben L. Pillow was an oil man who spent much of his adult life in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, where he managed an oil company. Upon his return to Austin in the mid-1930s, he built this house. Unfortunately, he was not able to enjoy it for long – he was struck by a car in 1938 and died as a result of his injuries.

Frank D. and Dorothy Kerbow purchased the house around 1940 and lived here until around 1943. Frank D. Kerbow was an attorney and an insurance adjuster with his office in the Littlefield Building. His first wife was Vivian Wimberley, daughter of a pioneer family; she died very young, and Frank married her younger sister, Dorothy, who had moved into Austin to help with Frank and Vivian's two daughters.

The longest-term owners and occupants of this house were Albert and Clementine Caster, who lived here for over 40 years, beginning around 1943. Albert Caster was a certified public accountant for many years, working for Tillman Trotter, and finally opening his own office. He later served as an accounting consultant to other firms in the city. Albert Caster was also active in civic activities, including sponsorship of the Austin Aqua Festival, and serving on the Austin Chamber of Commerce and other organizations.

STAFF COMMENTS

The house is beyond the bounds of any City survey to date.

Staff has evaluated this house for designation as a historic landmark and has determined that the house may meet the criteria for landmark designation as set forth in City Code:

- a. Architecture. The house is a very good example of a large-scale Tudor Revival house, with the signature steeply-pitched and prominent gables, a round-arched entry, a catslide roof, and a stucco exterior. There have been additions to the house that are sensitively done and do not overwhelm or detract from the original architectural design of the house. The house could qualify as a historic landmark under the criterion for architectural significance.
- b. Historical association. The persons with the longest associations with this house are Albert and Clementine Caster, who lived here for 40 years and who made some of the modifications to the house, including the addition and the construction of an apartment over the garage to create a duplex. Albert Caster was a certified public accountant who was involved with a number of civic activities in the city, including being a long-time sponsor of the Austin Aqua Fest, at one time, the biggest festival in the city.

- c. Archaeology. The house was not evaluated for its potential to yield significant data concerning the human history or prehistory of the region.
- d. Community value. The house does not possess a unique location, physical characteristic, or significant feature that contributes to the character, image, or cultural identity of the city, the neighborhood, or a particular demographic group.
- e. Landscape feature. The property is not a significant natural or designed landscape with artistic, aesthetic, cultural, or historical value to the city.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Postpone to November 19, 2018 to evaluate alternatives to demolition of this house. If the Commission does decide to release the demolition permit, then staff recommends completion of a City of Austin Documentation Package, consisting of photographs of all elevations, a dimensioned sketch plan, and a narrative history, for archiving at the Austin History Center.

Obituary of Frank D. Kerbow
Austin American-Statesman, September 17, 1995

Dorothy Wimberley Kerbow was born in San Marcos, Texas in 1918 and died in 2013.

Dorothy Wimberley Kerbow was the daughter of Calvin Hickman "Hick" Wimberley and his wife Mabel Rose Saunders Wimberley. On her paternal side, she was the granddaughter of Zachariah Taylor Wimberley and Mary Elizabeth Franklin Wimberley. She was the great-granddaughter of Pleasant Wimberley and Amanda Julian Jackson Wimberley who owned the mill around which the village of Wimberley grew. On her maternal side, Dorothy was the granddaughter of John Henry Saunders, Sr., and his wife Calladonia Williamson Saunders who were early settlers and civic leaders in Purgatory Springs, Texas; Wimberley, Texas; and San Marcos, Texas.

Dorothy was the youngest of Calvin and Mabel's three children. She was born in San Marcos but reared in New Braunfels where her parents moved so that her father could accept the position of manager of the city's water department. Louis, her brother, became a commander in the U. S. Navy and fought in WWII and Korea. Unlike her brother, her sister Vivien stayed close to home. She married Frank Kerbow when she was 18. The couple had two daughters before Vivian's tragic death from typhoid at the age of 25. After her sister's death Dorothy, with her take-charge personality, often took care of her two young nieces. She and the girls' father eventually married. Dorothy and Frank had two children of their own before divorcing.

Dorothy worked in the post office in Austin, Texas, from 1950 to 1972. She then moved to Wimberley, Texas, to accept the position of post master, serving from 1972 until retirement in 1978 when she was 60.

*After her retirement, Dorothy continued to live in Wimberley. She was rightfully proud of her lineage, so she began to write and edit articles for the Wimberley View and the San Marcos Daily Record. These articles chronicled the lives of her family and other pioneer families of Hays County, Texas. In 1986 the book Clear Springs and Limestone Ledges: A History of San Marcos and Hays County was published. The book focused not only on the county but also on the founding of San Marcos. Dorothy wrote the section about Wimberley for the book. In 1988 Dorothy edited the book Cedar Whacker: Stories of the Hill Country which was written by Charles Weldon Wimberley, a first cousin, who shared Dorothy's love of stories about the fiercely independent pioneers of Wimberley who gave up ranching and farming to take up axes. They became "cedar choppers" to fill the requests for cedar for railroad tracks, for ranchers' fences, and for the growing charcoal business. In 1989 Dorothy assisted another cousin Curlo Morris with his book Skillet and Trophy Fishing. In 1995 Dorothy's book Wimberley: Historic Belle of the Blanco was published. It is considered today to be the bible for information about Wimberley's pioneers, homes/buildings, and cemeteries with emphasis on the notables of the area in the 1930's.*

When she was in her late-80's, Dorothy decided to move to Austin, Texas, to be near her two children and her grandchildren. However, even after the move to Austin, she and her children and grandchildren assisted the Wimberley Institute of Cultures with its restoration of the Wimberley-Hughes House, the home of her grandparents. It was in Austin that Dorothy died at the age of 94. She left behind a legacy of civic and family responsibility well filled.

Albert W. and Clementine Caster (ca. 1943 – ca. 1984)

The 1920 U.S. Census shows Albert W. Caster as the 21-year old son of William W. and Ida Caster of Denton County, Texas. Albert W. Caster was born in Texas and was a clerk at a lumber yard. His father, William W. Caster, 52, was born in Michigan and was a house carpenter. His mother, Ida Caster, 41, was born in Louisiana, and had no occupation listed. Albert was the oldest of the Casters' 4 children, all of whom had been born in Texas. None of the younger children had an occupation shown in the census report.

His 1942 World War II draft registration card shows that Albert Wesley Caster was born in Fort Worth in 1899. He was employed by T.B. Trotter, CPA. He was 5'-8" tall, weighed 155, and had blue eyes and blond hair.

Albert W. Caster and Clementine Appling were married in Caldwell County, Texas on May 30, 1931.

Albert Caster was born in Fort Worth in 1899 and died in 1986. Clementine Frances Appling Caster was born in Luling, Texas in 1900 and died in 1988. They are buried in Pflugerville, Texas.
