The current ordinance limits the membership of the Downtown Austin Community Court Advisory Committee to representatives of certain local social service agencies. There are a number of stakeholders who represent other agencies who have expressed an interest in serving on the committee. The Committee currently has several vacancies, which has interfered with meeting quorum requirements.

This ordinance removes specific agency requirements, and allows the Council to appoint any interested citizen to the Committee. However, the appointments must include members who represent the Downtown business and public service communities. The ordinance also sets a two year staggered membership term.

The Advisory Committee members voted unanimously to approve this amendment. The committee members believe the amendment addresses many of the issues above referenced. The new language will add more flexibility to the membership so the positions can be filled by a variety of stakeholders who are dedicated to serving on the committee.
