"Austin, Texas, November 28, 1928.

To the Honorable Mayor and Members of the City Council,
Austin, Texas.

We, the members of the Board of Equalization, appointed by your Honorable Body to equalize all property values, both real and personal, within the City of Austin for the year 1928, beg leave to report:

That we passed on five or six hundred complaints and visited every piece of property that was complained of where we could not make adjustment otherwise. We made a number of adjustments, changes and corrections not complained of, so as to equalize properties.

All parties that came before the Board were given all the time and attention they wanted to state their cases, and we treated all alike without fear or favor.

We did all the work that we could possibly do in the time allowed by the City Charter. We could further state that the Board could sit indefinitely and never fully adjust equalization.

The Board adjourned November 16, 1928.

We wish to extend our thanks to the office force of the Tax Department for the valuable assistance rendered the Board.

Respectfully submitted,

(Sgd) C. P. Ledbetter, Chairman,
