August marked a slight decrease in activity, as the Center took in 78 fewer cats and 132 fewer dogs than in July. Outcomes were down as well, with cat live outcomes declining by 136 and dog live outcomes declining by 246 from July.

While the decline of adoptions, transfers, and owner-returns was noticeable, the decline in intakes allowed the Center to maintain a steady amount of animals in care; around 950 companion animals were in the Center's care at both the end of July and August.

The euthanasia rate yielded the least difference of all outcomes: 161 were humanely euthanized in August as compared to 131 in July.

Though the amount of live outcomes decreased from July to August, the Center still outperformed August of 2011: 252 more companion animals were adopted out in August of 2012 than in August of 2011.
