Pete Slover is Senior Counsel for the Pedernales Electric Cooperative, Inc. (PEC) in Johnson City, Texas, where he has overseen the development and integration of open meetings and open records concepts into the private corporate culture. Before joining PEC in 2008, Pete worked on both sides of the Public Information Act, as a reporter for nearly two decades (including 17 years at the Dallas Morning News) and then as special counsel to Texas Comptroller Susan Combs. He frequently speaks on open records and government transparency, and has integrated those subjects into his work as an visiting instructor at the University Of Texas School Of Journalism. He lives in Dripping Springs, with his wife, Catharine, and three daughters.
