2015 FIM Road Racing World Championship Grand Prix (MotoGP at COTA)
Attendance Certification Support Document

Every April, Circuit of The Americas hosts MotoGP, which is the premium motorcycle racing series in the world. MotoGP has a global television reach of over 11 million viewers and our event showcases Austin, Texas and Circuit of The Americas to their global audience. With 36,610 fans at the primary event, COTA reached 99.6% of the chosen metric from the EIS of 36,759 fans at COTA. This does not include additional attendance by team personnel, COTA credentialed, drivers, family & friends of drivers, sponsors and media which added an additional 7,811 for a total of 44,421.

This year Circuit of The Americas hosted another successful MotoGP race, one of only two races of its kind in the United States. This was our third year as a MotoGP host and COTA was able to cement our position as a world-class venue for the event and continue to increase the visibility and participation surrounding the event.

Red Bull continued to be the title sponsor of the event, who maintained their tradition of supporting the event with a state-wide grass roots activation campaign. This year, their on-site activation focused on a much greater area for fan engaging elements. In addition to Red Bull's larger fan areas, we were able to double motorcycle manufacturer participation by growing the size of their activations and increasing the number of participating manufacturers (KTM, BMW, Victory and Harley-Davidson were added to the mix). COTA was also able to extend our exclusive relationship with the Ducati Island for the next two years, which is the single largest and highest quality fan entertainment and interactive motorcycle experience on the MotoGP circuit.

The addition of motorcycle demo rides by several manufacturers allowed us to provide a more interactive experience for our fans. The participating manufacturers in that program were Yamaha, Suzuki, Honda, Harley-Davidson and Victory Motorcycle. The manufacturers had a great experience at the event, recording new records in the number of demo rides taken, unique riders and fans registering as being interested in buying a new motorcycle in the next six months.

The Circuit of The Americas continued to invest in building the local profile of the event by sponsoring The Handbuilt Motorcycle show, presented by Revival Cycles, which is a local moto-centric event held in downtown Austin. COTA engaged local Austin artists to create motorcycle themed graffiti wall art in a couple of strategic locations in downtown Austin as part of a viral marketing campaign. Some elements from The Handbuilt Motorcycle show were later brought to the circuit for fan display.

COTA also enhanced the hospitality experience associated with the event by incorporating displays from the Evel Knievel and Kevin Schwantz museums and the integration of many of the exhibitors from The Handbuilt Motorcycle Show. As a result, participation in the hospitality program increased from prior years and received higher approval ratings post-race.
